WELCOME TO METROWEEN

MORGAN ROUSSEAU, MANAGING EDITOR

Halloween is creeping up on us. Sadly, this year it falls on a Tuesday, so the debauchery will likely unfold over the weekend. And you, dear readers, deserve a break from the chaos of the news cycle – and the drudgery of the work week. Let's look forward to scintillating spirits, crisp leaves, creepy costumes and of course, candy. Inside you'll read about the psychology behind our fears, the Halloween tastes of the Boston Yeti, and local Halloween festivities. Oh, and we have a 1-on-1 with the newest cast member of "Stranger Things." Read on, if you dare, to prepare for the season's spookiest holiday.

Spice up your Halloween decor with these pumpkin-carving ideas

Not your mama's jack-o'-lantern.

ERIN TIERNAN

Despite the blue skies and 80-degree days, it's actually fall, which means it's time to pull your scarves, leggings and boots out of storage and start transforming your home into Halloween wonderland or nightmare — the choice is yours.

The staple for any self-respecting Halloween decorator is, of course, the jack-o'-lantern. The carved pumpkin gives some leeway for creativity with a classic touch.

These days, pumpkin carving is somewhat of an art of its own, and Metro has found some of the spookiest, funniest and most clever designs to inspire you as you set out to carve your jack-o'-lantern this year. Check out the photos for inspiration.

Metro also has a few tips on how to pick the perfect pumpkin and how to keep it fresh once it's carved.

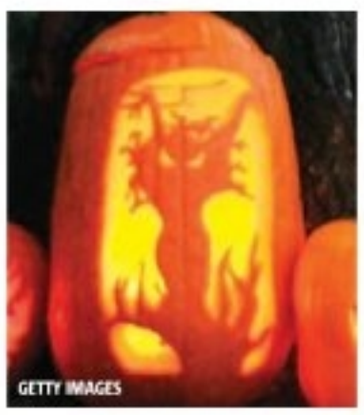
How to pick the perfect Halloween pumpkin

The first thing to remember is all pumpkins aren't created equal, and while size matters, bigger isn't always better, according to homemaking blog The Spruce.

When hunting for the perfect squash for carving your jack-o'-lantern, you'll want to look for a nice shape (rounded, maybe slightly flat on one side) that will last for several days once carved.

Once you've made your choice, there are a few things to remember that will help you get it home in one piece:

• Make sure your pumpkin is fully mature (it will appear firm on the outside).



GETTY IMAGES

• Never carry your pumpkin by the stem — stems snap off easily and will leave your pumpkin open to infection and rot, which will lead to a quick demise for your carved creation.

• Inspect your pumpkin for bruises or soft spots — this means your pumpkin is already past its prime and won't last you too long.

Keeping your pumpkin fresh for Halloween and beyond

Howl at the moon! FLICKR

CARVING TIPS

- Keep the pumpkin in a cool spot, out of direct sunlight.
- Spray it with an anti-transpirant, like Wilt-Pruf.
- Drape the entire pumpkin with a damp towel.
- Protect it from animals that might be tempted to take a bite.
- Don't leave it outdoors if there's a threat of frost.

Nobody likes a dried-out, shriveled up jack-o'-lantern, so it's important to follow the steps listed above to stop it from decaying as soon as it's cut and exposed to air.

As with most things, the fresher the better, but if you need to carve your pumpkin a few days before displaying it, these tips will help it live a long, fulfilling life.

9 Family-friendly Halloween events around Boston

Pumpkins, witches and pooches, oh my! MATTHEW DINARO

Bring the kids to these family-friendly Halloween events. JOHN ANDREWS PHOTOGRAPHY

Still figuring out what to do with the kids? We've got a few fun ideas for this Halloween weekend.

Halloween Crypt Tours
This one's for older kids (King's Chapel suggests 10+), but it's pretty cool: a tour of the crypt beneath King's Chapel, one of Boston's oldest standing churches, dating back to 1686. Through Oct. 31, King's Chapel, 58 Tremont St., $10, mkt.com

Salem's Haunted Happenings
Salem throws the best Halloween party, with hundred of out-of-towners descending on the small seaside city every fall. The event features tours, theaters, magic show, séances and much more. Through Nov. 4, various locations, Salem, prices vary, hauntedhappenings.org

Zoo Howl
The Franklin Park Zoo Halloween festivities include trick-or-treating along the Zoo trails, plus games, arts and crafts, face painting, a costume contest and other activities. Oct. 28-29, Franklin Park Zoo, 1 Franklin Park Rd., Boston, $20, zoonewengland.or

Ghoolidge Corner
Brookline Grown created a "pumpkin patch" for Halloween. Choose and carve your own pumpkin, and enjoy a little treat of cider and caramel apples to boot. Oct. 28-31, Green Line Growers, 10 Waldo St., Brookline, free admission, brookline-grown.com

Don't forget our furry friends! PROVIDED

Pet Parade
Enter your own pet, or just come and be amused. Or maybe dress up the whole family in some theme—wouldn't your pug make a great R2D2? Oct. 28, noon-2 p.m., Fanueil Hall Marketplace, 4 S. Market St., free, faneuilhallmarketplaceboston.com

Dia de los Muertos
Somerville's Taza Chocolate celebrates el Dia de los Muertos instead of Halloween each year, throwing a festival in their parking lot with free hot chocolate and lots of Tex-Mex food. Oct. 28, noon-5 p.m., Taza Chocolate Factory, 561 Windsor St., free, tazachocolate.com

Pumpkin Palzooa
Lawn on D hosts this festival, not strictly Halloween-themed, but more of a goodbye to autumn. The events in daylight hours are the more kid-friendly—pumpkin carving, train rides, face painting and more. Oct. 28, noon-11 p.m., Lawn on D, 420 D. St., free, signatureboston.com/lawn-on-d

Beantown Autumn Fest
Hosted by massALLY, it's not strictly a Halloween festival, but it's still a great destination for families with younger kids, who can enjoy carnival rides, inflatables, face painting and pumpkin decorating—and they'll get free food and free admission to all the rides. Oct. 29, 12-4pm, Ben Franklin Institute of Technology, 41 Berkeley St., free, beantownfest.org

'Nightmare Before Christmas'
Keith Lockhart and the Boston Pops will perform Danny Elfman's entire soundtrack live alongside a screening of the film. Oct. 30-31, Symphony Hall, 301 Mass. Ave., Cambridge, $45-$95, bso.org

The best neighborhoods to go trick-or-treating in Boston

Here are the top spots to fill up your Halloween bucket.

ZIPPORAH OSEI

Trick-or-treating is one of the tastiest Halloween traditions, and finding the right place to do it is just as important as the act itself. Guarantee you get the best candy collecting experience by visiting the neighborhoods least likely to send you home empty-handed.

Every year, online real-estate marketplace Zillow releases a list of the best places in the country to trick-or-treat. The top three cities this year are San Francisco, San Jose and Philadelphia. While Boston only clocked in at No. 32 on Zillow's list, there are still plenty of neighborhoods in the city for you and the kids to score some candy.

When it comes to trick-or-treating in Boston, the cream of the crop is Bay Village. This neighborhood is known as the city's "secret garden," and on Oct. 31, it's the best place to fill your bag. While it may be one of the city's smallest neighborhoods, if you go door-to-door in Bay Village, you'll be sure to walk away with full-size candy bars.

Charlestown and Beacon Hill come in second and third. These are two of Boston's oldest neighborhoods, which should give your night a haunted touch.

For those in west Boston, head to West Roxbury and Roslindale for all your Halloween candy needs. Both neighborhoods are larger than any others on the list, which gives you plenty of variety while trick-or-treating. Residents will have more than enough candy waiting to be passed out.

The team at Zillow puts its index together by looking at places that have high home values, houses that are closer in distance to reduce walking and lots of children under 10, so you can be sure you're in for a treat.

Picking any of these Boston neighborhoods should give you and the kids the ultimate Halloween night experience.

5 Can't-miss Halloween movie screenings

Spend the weekend enjoying these cult classics. CHARLIE WOLFSON

One of the best ways to celebrate the spooky season is by taking in some classic horror films. From Stephen King to Tim Burton, there's a seemingly endless cache of horror masterpieces on display around Boston this Halloween.

"The Rocky Horror Picture Show"
The 1976 cult classic provides a chance for audience members to dress up in costume, sing, shout and laugh their way through a film alongside a theater full of fellow fans. No "Rocky Horror" screening would be complete without a shadow cast – the Teseracte Players of Boston will be doing the honors.
Oct. 31, 8 p.m., Somerville Theatre, 55 Davis Square, Somerville, $15, somervilletheatre.com

"Pet Sematary"
A Stephen King masterpiece, "Pet Sematary" is the story of a normal family that moves from the hustle and bustle of Chicago to rural Maine – but chaos and horror ensue when they happen upon a pet cemetery built on a Native American burial ground. Star Denise Crosby will join for a Q&A after the screening.
Oct. 31, 7 p.m., Coolidge Corner Theatre, 290 Harvard St., Brookline, $12.25, Coolidge.org

"Ghostbusters"
It may be a Tuesday, but that doesn't mean ghosts won't need to be busted on Halloween. Forget about your alarm the following morning and head to the Brattle for a screening of this 1984 classic starring Bill Murray, Dan Akroyd and Sigourney Weaver.
Oct. 31, 8 p.m., Brattle Theatre, 40 Brattle St., Cambridge, $11, brattlefilm.org

Halloween horror marathon
Get ready for the ultimate horror experience. This annual event at the Coolidge Corner Theatre features 12 hours of zombies, ghouls, demons and monsters on 35 mm film. The marathon will start with "Zombie" and "Night of the Living Dead" and will continue with four unannounced films – you'll have to attend to find out.
Oct. 28, 11:59 p.m., Coolidge Corner Theatre, 290 Harvard St., Brookline, $30, Coolidge.org

"The Nightmare Before Christmas"
The Tim Burton animated flick will be showing throughout Halloween weekend. The stop-motion film tells the story of Jack Skellington, a resident of Halloween Town who stumbles upon Christmas Town and wants to introduce his Halloween mates to the new holiday, which brings about a number of consequences.
Oct. 27-31, Regal Fenway, 201 Brookline Ave., $13.50, regmovies.com

Cambridge hotel hosts 'Stranger Things'-themed '80s party

Hit the dance floor after binge-watching season 2. NETFLIX

Have a stranger evening this Halloween weekend.
MATT JUUL

If you go:

Oct. 27, 7:11 p.m.-11:11 p.m., Kimpton Marlowe Hotel, 25 Edwin H Land Blvd., Cambridge, $25+, hotelmarlowe.com

Get ready to party like it's 1984 at a "Stranger Things"-themed bash in Cambridge this weekend.

Once you're done binge-watching the new season on Netflix, head over to the Kimpton Marlowe Hotel on Friday night for a special, '80s-style Halloween party. Dubbed a "Stranger Evening," the event will transform the hotel's outdoor courtyard into the ultimate party space for "Stranger Things" fans.

Sip on a Demogorgon cocktail. PROVIDED

Get your groove on with Boston DJ and former "Bachelorette" contestant Kupah James, who's bringing all of your favorite '80s jams to the dance floor. In addition to the beats, the party will include a special appearance by "Stranger Things" season 2 actor Brett Gelman.

Attendees can also expect a bunch of delicious tributes to the series' fan-favorite characters, including Benny's breathtaking burgers and fries, Dustin's decadent chocolate pudding, plus a wall of Eggo waffles in honor of Eleven. Don't forget to take a trip to the Upside Down with the party's "otherworldly" dessert.

Channel your inner Hopper and wash down the meal with a selection of beers and Wild Thing cider from Artifact Cider Project. The drink menu will also include a Demogorgon cocktail made with Ghost Tequila, plus a special wine and waffle pairing.

All ticket holders can attend the dance-party portion of the event, while general-admission and VIP ticket holders will also receive two beverage tickets, as well as the chance to munch on '80s-themed food. Attendees who do opt for the VIP treatment will have access to a private bar with special after-hours, complimentary parking, plus they'll take home a custom-themed trucker hat.

The ultimate guide to visiting Salem, Massachusetts

Explore a place where it's Halloween 365 days a year.

SARAH SWEENEY

Salem is a town of dichotomies. The site of the infamous 1692 witch trials is now one of the quaintest New England destinations.

The preserved colonial architecture and cobblestone streets are a glaring contrast to its frenetic theme-park vibe. While October is the busiest month to visit, Salem is truly a place where Halloween never ends.

Although people were once accused of being witches here, Salem is now filled with all sorts of practicing sorcerers, psychics and seers. It's a town reckoning with its past every day of the year, not just on Halloween.

EAT & DRINK

Sea Level Oyster Bar
The focus is freshness and seafood at this rustic, waterfront restaurant. The raw bar is especially tempting, with everything from oysters to littlenecks to peel and eat shrimp steamed in local beer. Just don't forget the hot lobster roll or the chowder fries, featuring the universal starch of choice topped with clam chowder and smothered in cheddar cheese.
94 Wharf St., sealeveloysterbar.com

Turner's Seafood
Alexander Graham Bell unveiled his plans for the telephone at this eatery, housed in Salem's historic Lyceum Hall. It's also allegedly haunted. Bridget Bishop, the first person executed in the witch trials, is rumored to have owned the land here and people have reported seeing a female apparition. Come for classic dishes like surf 'n' turf, then ask the manager nicely if you can explore upstairs — that's where the ghostliest activity is reported.
43 Church St.

BitBar
Another haunted hotspot located in the Old Salem Jail, BitBar is a beer garden and arcade, featuring classic games like Ms.

Meet the new bad boy of 'Stranger Things' season 2

Dacre Montgomery wants to be your new favorite TV villain.

MATT JUUL

Dacre Montgomery's Billy is the new bad boy in town. NETFLIX

Move over, Frank Underwood, there's a new bad boy on Netflix, and his name is Dacre Montgomery.

The Aussie actor is trading in his red Power Ranger suit for an '80s mullet as he takes on the role of Billy for the highly anticipated second season of "Stranger Things." Montgomery tells Metro that he hopes the character will become a fan favorite, even though he's an "unpredictable" villain who terrorizes the young heroes of Hawkins, Indiana.

Ahead of the new season's debut, we caught up with the 22-year-old star to find out what fans can expect from Billy when "Stranger Things" returns.

Billy is the new bad boy in town. How does he factor into the new season?

He and Steve Harrington, Joe [Keery's] character, come head-to-head. He just feels threatened. The amazing actor Will Chase, who plays my father, he's the catalyst for the way that Billy is. When we first meet him in the first five episodes, this guy is like the stereotypical bully/jock character, but there's far more to it than that. When we meet his father, you can humanize the villain a little bit more by seeing that my father is more of a monster than I am. That just spawns out into everything. I'm hard on Lucas (Caleb McLaughlin) in the show because of his relationship with Sadie [Sink], the actress who plays Max, my stepsister.

Will Billy be a villain fans love to hate?

I hope so! I hope, because with antiheroes – like Kevin Spacey in "House of Cards" – you want to see a villain that's like, "Why do I like this guy so much? It's frustrating that I like him."

The Duffer brothers made you prepare for the role by watching a lot of Jack Nicholson's performances. How did his work influence your character?

Jack's acting style, specifically in "The Shining," there's an unpredictable quality to the character that makes scenes quite sinister. That's what I was taking from him.

How does Billy and Max's relationship play out on the show?

Everyone's like, "Billy's so hard on Max and doesn't care about Max," but I think he does. He cares about Max a lot. There's this thing from his stepmother and father to look after her, and maybe that's what's driving him. I have a sister, and we're the same age difference as me and Sadie. At the end of the day, he has to love his sister and care about his sister in order to follow up, to see where she is and make sure that she's not getting into trouble. Because he's a teenager, there are all these chemicals, this journey to manhood, it just comes out in different ways – anger, a lot of the time. God bless Sadie, because she's an amazing actress and wise beyond her years.

Has your experience with rabid "Power Rangers" fans prepared you for dealing with the devoted "Stranger Things" fandom?

I hope that it did. I think "Power Rangers" and "Stranger Things," there's small differences. "Stranger Things," the fandom is much newer, it's much fresher. People are very, very keen to see this second season as soon as possible. Having seen the cast of the first season and how they've navigated life through their loss of their anonymity over the last few months, a combination of that and "Power Rangers" has probably prepared me a little bit. I try to imagine that I have a grasp of what it's going to be like, but I truly don't think that I do.

Should fans expect you to dress up as your "Power Rangers" character or Billy for Halloween this year?

I'm so bad with costumes. One of my mates said I should be a red Power Ranger with a mullet [laughs]. I don't know.

"Stranger Things" season 2 debuts on Netflix Oct. 27.

The best scary podcasts to binge-listen this Halloween. HOPE MORAWA

Sometimes it feels like we're already living inside a horror movie, with the Great Trumpkin in office and "30 Rock" leaving Netflix, among other real-life terrors. But thanks to scary podcasts, we can tune in, tune out and live in denial of our frightening reality by distracting ourselves with tales of true crime, made-up horrors and everything in between. Here are our favorites.

"My Favorite Murder"

"Let's sit crooked and talk straight." Every week on "My Favorite Murder," hosts Georgia Hardstark and Karen Kilgariff exchange their favorite true-crime tales. Touching on everything from serial killers to cannibalism to "I Survived" recaps, HardKil captivates listeners with their truthful, unabashed storytelling and honest and relatable reactions ("Oh my God, can you describe my face right now?")

"Lore"

Ever wonder where your favorite scary stories got their origin? "Lore" creator Aaron Mahnke has some answers. On the popular podcast, he explores the real-life roots of so many horror legends, from vampires to werewolves, and offers theories behind universal fears, like of the dark or hospitals.
lorepodcast.com

"Limetown"

On Feb. 8, 2004, Limetown, a fictional neuroscience research facility in Tennessee, was found abandoned and void of its 300-odd residents. In this seven-part radio drama written and directed by Zack Akers and produced by Skip Bronkie, listeners follow reporter Lia Haddock (voiced by actress Annie-Sage Whitehurst) as she investigates the mystery. With "Twin Peaks"/Roanoake vibes throughout, this tale unfolds with so many surprises that if it were a book, we wouldn't be able to put it down.

"Lore" podcast explores the origins of your favorite horror legends. INSTAGRAM/@LOREPODCAST

"Last Podcast on the Left"

If three grown men screaming into a microphone is up your alley, then "Last Podcast on the Left" is definitely for you. Hosts Ben Kissel, Marcus Parks and Henry Zebrowski talk real-life and fictional horror each episode, taking you on a journey of questionable commentary and mostly-inappropriate laughs while visiting the darker side of humanity. Horror films, creepypasta entries, serial killers, cults and beyond, no subject is off-limits for these rowdy dudes.

"Welcome to Night Vale"

This bimonthly podcast serves up Area 51/"X-Files" vibes with its local news radio show, keeping listeners up to date on all the "Stranger Things" happening in this fictional desert town. Between giant glowing clouds, floating cats and a mysterious musical weather report, you can always expect the unexpected. welcometonightvale.com

"Stuff You Missed in History Class"

Birthed from the website HowStuffWorks.com in 2008, "Stuff You Missed in History Class" has its own nifty little Halloween category, covering topics like the fact and fiction behind voodoo queen Marie Laveau, the Salem witch trials and the tradition of trick-or-treating.

13 of Boston's best Halloween parties and events

Get spooky this weekend.

MATT JUUL

The only thing harder than finding the right costume is figuring out where to party on Halloween. For those of us who are a bit too old to go trick-or-treating, here are 13 of the best parties and events to celebrate Halloween in Boston.

Have a night to "dismember" at Cask N' Flagon.

ALL PHOTOS PROVIDED

A Night to "Dismember" at Cask N' Flagon
The Fenway bar is hosting a dance party where attendees can take home Bruins tickets, gift cards and more should they win a "Zombie Beauty Contest." What's your favorite Halloween memory? WARNER BROS. PICTURES

Boston Yeti and BostonTweet talk about their favorite horror films and traditions

Halloween is a holiday that conjures up plenty of nostalgia and customs. Metro talked with two Boston figures about some of theirs. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

Halloween has its share of fanatics. For some, it's the best holiday of the year, made all the better by their favorite scary movie, spooky (or sweet) traditions and the memories of their impressive costume creativity.

Metro asked two notable Boston figures – Tom O'Keefe of @BostonTweet, and the incomparable Boston Yeti – about all their favorite Halloween things. Maybe you'll get some inspiration for your next horror movie night or costume.

The Boston Yeti meets Chewbacca. PROVIDED

BOSTON YETI

What's your favorite scary movie?
My favorite is probably the 1957 British fantasy/horror film "The Abominable Snowman," starring Peter Cushing. I snuck into a drive-in screening of it one time!

What's your favorite Halloween tradition?
My favorite Halloween tradition is buying a family size bag of Nestle Sno-Caps candy and walking amongst the Boston trick-or-treaters. Sometimes I dress up: last year I wore went as Little Bo Peep. Because of my furry and fantastic appearance, it's really the only time during the year when I truly blend in.

What's your favorite Halloween memory?
This is an easy one! Meeting Chewbacca is my favorite Halloween memory. I love "Star Wars" and it's not often I'm in the presence of someone taller and hairier than me.

What's the best costume you've worn as a kid, and as an adult?
For the kiddos, I loved those classic Collegeville costumes that were popular in the 1970s. For adults, I'm partial to fruit costumes, you know, people dressing as apples, pears, and bananas. I think we need more kiwi costumes, though – not enough Halloween kiwis out there.

TOM O'KEEFE

What's your favorite scary movie?
My favorite scary movie is "Halloween" — I actually watched it last night as part of my favorite Halloween indoor tradition to watch the AMC Halloween Marathon at least once. I love the cinematography of the film and how the thought of Michael Myers lurking in the backyard is absolutely terrifying. It's not gore, but rather fear, and that's terrifying.

What's your favorite Halloween memory?
My favorite Halloween memory is trick or treating around my neighborhood with my mom. I was often Dracula. My dad didn't go with us because he stayed home to pass out candy. However, every year there was a scary man with a mask just standing under a tree with a flashlight under his chin. It would scare the bejesus out of all the kids. Found out years later that it was my dad.

What's your favorite Halloween tradition?
My favorite Halloween-night tradition these days is to go to Brook Street in Brookline. The street is jam-packed with kids and most of the houses go all out for Halloween with decorations and haunted houses. The police block off the road and it's a great time. Highly recommend.

Why do we like being scared? There are psychological reasons why fear is fun

Steven Schlozman, a psychologist and horror fanatic, helps us understand why we love the thrill of scary movies and haunted houses. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

People who like horror movies are actually scared by them, and there's a reason they enjoy that feeling. PEXELS

Halloween is all about haunted houses and scary movies — at least, for those who enjoy the thrill of being frightened.

Steven Schlozman is one of those people, a horror fanatic and horror novel author. He's also a psychiatrist at the Clay Center for Young Healthy Minds and an assistant professor of psychiatry at Harvard Medical School.

Schlozman said that he personally loves horror because he likes the feeling of being scared, but it's important to remember that not everybody does.

"As a child psychologist, I remind people that just because you like being scared, doesn't mean your kid will like it or be ready for it," he said. "I've got two kids, and one likes it and one doesn't."

But for those who do like it, there are some psychological reasons why.

First, it's important to note that those who enjoy scary movies are actually affected by them. It's not that they're unbothered.

"People who like horror films actually get afraid, or at least have a flight-or-fight response," he said. "The people not affected actually don't enjoy them."

When watching a scary movie, your brain tries to figure out what it is that's frightening and why, and that's an interesting enough psychological exercise to keep you glued to the screen.

"Most of what scares us are things that look familiar but aren't familiar. It's the notion of pattern recognition," Schlozman said. "Take the pale man in 'Pan's Labyrinth,' where he has eyes in his hands and holds them up to his head — it's a terrifying scene, and part of what makes it so is because there's a human-like shape there."

"You recognize the pattern of 'human,' but it doesn't match everything else you see," he continued. "Our brains are tickled by that. We love that because, from a very early age, we figure out how to recognize patterns."

People who never go through the exercise of asking why something scares them tend to not be that interested in getting scared, Schlozman said.

There are limits to that. Because Schlozman is a dad, scary movies that involve kids (a common horror trope, he added) are harder for him. They're not as fun, he said, but he can at least understand the complex feelings around why that is.

Horror movies and haunted houses are also simulated situations. You're not really being chased, but you get to think about what you would do if you had to run. Though we're hardwired to avoid those situations, Schlozman said, we also are hardwired to run through scenarios in our own head of where might lose control, so we can figure out how to respond.

And then there's the community around horror. It's a genre that has spawned conventions, festivals and meetup groups. It fosters connections: Bring up the first scary movie you saw, and most people their own story to share. Watch a scary movie, and you end up talking with friends about why a character went down those stairs and what you would have done instead.

"If you go to a horror convention or film, people who don't even know each other talk about films in a way that doesn't happen in other genres," Schlozman said. "I think what's fun about horror or fear is it's a universal experience. We can all relate to it, and at end of the day, it's usually not fear that drives story, it's the way that people respond to the fear."

The history of Halloween includes matchmaking, spirits and ancient Celtic traditions

The first lady who successfully bobbed for an apple wasn't just hungry — she was hoping for a husband by the following Halloween, according to lore. KIMBERLY M. AQUILINA

Halloween is an annual excuse to gorge on candy, dress up in scandalous costumes or shut our porch lights out and pretend we aren't home. But how did it all begin? This is the history of Halloween.

Halloween is celebrated on Oct. 31. It originated with the ancient Celtic festival Samhain, during which bonfires were lit and costumes donned to warn off spirits. All Saints Day (Nov. 1) was brought into the mix in the eighth century by Pope Gregory III and included some elements of Samhain. Samhain became known as All Hallow Eve and, eventually, Halloween.

As Halloween evolved, it began to lose its religious connections. Rigid Protestant beliefs limited the celebration in colonial New England, according to History, and it was much more common in the southern colonies.

The origins of Halloween began in religion, but evolved into the candy-filled celebration we know today. PIXABAY

Customs from Europe and the American Indians blended, creating an American version of Halloween. "Play parties" were events celebrating the harvest, where people would tell stories of the dead, dance and sing. Mischief also gained popularity.

As immigrants, including the Irish escaping the Potato Famine, flooded America in the second half of the 19th century, Halloween became a national celebration.

There are rituals that have all but been forgotten, like matchmaking.

Many rituals focused on the future, according to History. Single women would take part in rituals that would (hopefully) result in marriage by the following Halloween.

Women of marrying age would also throw apple peels over their shoulders and decipher the meaning by how the peels fell. The idea was to look for the shape of the future husband's initials.

Mischief Night: When is it, when did it start, and is it the same as Devil's Night?

You'll also find out why you need to be prepared for some cleaning. LINNEA ZIELINSKI

The night before Halloween, known as Mischief Night or Devil's Night can be a trick or a treat, depending on which side you end up on.

If there's any day that can be thought of as the official TP-your-neighbor's-house day, Mischief Night is it. Whether you refer to it as Mischief Night or Devil's Night depends on the tricks you plan to pull on your unsuspecting friends and neighbors.

What do people do on Devil's Night?

Usually the pranks pulled on Devil's Night are such classics that they've become stereotypes in how we talk about Halloween: TP-ing someone's house or lawn and soaping their windows on the mild end, and tossing eggs, rotten tomatoes or flaming bags of dog doodie on their doorstep on the more severe end.

Wait, is Mischief Night the same as Devil's Night?

Although historically the names were interchangeable and both referred to the night before Oct. 31 or Halloween, the meaning of Devil's Night has become more specific. The night of small pranks on the part of kids and teenagers is marked in areas throughout the U.S., but in some areas, like Detroit, these nights saw serious destruction, particularly via arson.

The night before Halloween is dubbed Mischief Night or Devil's Night. ISTOCK

So Devil's Night dates back to the 1970s?

It dates back even earlier. The earliest reference of Devil's Night can be found in the 1940s, but Mischief Night predates it. Those references go back to 1790, The Guardian reports, and a school play involving the fellow of St. John's College, Oxford, "which ended in 'an Ode to Fun which praises children's tricks on Mischief Night in most approving terms.'"

Belfast is a sight to behold at Christmastime. ALL PHOTOS BY TOURISM IRELAND

St. George's Market

Enjoy the last meal of first-class passengers on the Titanic at Rayanne House.

From pubs to Michelin grub

Taste the finer things in life at Belfast's historic taverns and up-and-coming restaurants. ED CONDRAN

Belfast's uniquely inviting pubs are an Irish tradition. Some of the finest watering holes can be found in the Northern Irish capital, and that's the way it's been for centuries.

More recently, contemporary Belfast has risen to become a top culinary destination with an array of highly rated restaurants. These bistros have earned Michelin stars that would sate any foodie who enjoys fresh, high-quality meals.

Tradition at its finest

Start with the Ulster Fry, which is a traditional Irish breakfast you'll never forget. Your plate will be filled with eggs, potato farl, sausages, bacon, black pudding and tomato. According to James Bell, head chef of George's of the Market, the secret is cooking everything in one pan.

Go from George's of the Market to St. George's Market, which is the last surviving Victorian covered market in Belfast. You'll be impressed by the array of local produce — there's nothing like sampling fresh produce from the green pastures of Ireland — as well as fish, meat and crafts.

The sights and sounds of the vibrant market are particularly memorable, too.

A meal from history

It's been just over a century since the Titanic's fateful maiden voyage, but the fascination with the ship hasn't abated.

A popular and extraordinary experience can be had when ordering from the Titanic Menu at Rayanne House. Enjoy a recreation of the nine-course dinner served to first-class passengers which includes poached salmon with Mousseline sauce, garnished with cucumber and fresh dill, pan seared filet mignon topped with foie gras and truffle drizzled with cognac.

There's never been a better time to discover Northern Ireland. Book direct flights to Belfast from Stewart International Airport and Providence/Boston for as little as $99 one way at norwegian.com (*T&C apply, subject to availability)

Riches of the sea

Shellfish lovers should experience the Mourne Seafood Bar. Start with oysters Japanese Style (shredded cucumber, pickled ginger, spiced soy). If you like shellfish with a kick, graduate to salt and chili squid, then cap the experience with grilled lobster.

Fans of creative and modern cuisine should stop in to Ox. The cod with carrots and coral butter is difficult to pass up. Blackberry compote is a must dessert.

Pubs to remember

The Muddlers Club is a great place to start to experience Belfast's pub scene.

Like many of the city's fine pubs, the Muddlers Club has a rich history — it was once home to a 200-year-old secret society located in the Cathedral Quarter. The secret is out these days, but you can still score a seat at the bar as well as a table. The Tempted Sweet Cider Point or a Galloper's Golden Ale are good places to start.

The Muddler's Club also offers an eclectic menu. The cod in squid ink and the trout with cauliflower and curry are popular choices — don't forget the hand-cut fries.

Stix and Stones won't break your bones or your travel budget. The large, modern restaurant is relatively new but serves traditional Irish favorites alongside contemporary libations. The menu is a cut above your average pub grub, with options like confit duck. All of the beef served up comes from Ireland and is dry aged for 28 days, a true treat for meat lovers.

Part of the charm of the Duke of York is that it is nestled along a narrow cobbled alley in an historic area. The interior is similarly lived-in — old dusty bottles, an extensive whiskey list and the bartenders who are on another level.

Ask and they'll teach you how to properly pour a Guinness, and of course there's no need to instruct anyone how to drink down Ireland's famous stout.

Still a beer town

Guinness may make its home elsewhere in Ireland, but if you're into breweries, you won't be disappointed in Belfast.

Hilden Brewing Co. has an array of quality beers. There's the light and crisp Belfast Blonde. Its antithesis is the Hilden Irish Stout, full-bodied and hearty. In between is the Buck's Head, which has a distinctive hops character and a bit of welcome bitterness.

Cider has enjoyed a huge revival over recent years, and Armagh Cider Company has been at the forefront of the movement. A number of mellow and crisp concoctions turn out of its barrels, made from apples grown on the cidery's own farm.

When it comes to dining and drinking, Belfast offers an unparalleled combination of the traditional and modern flair.

The Crown Liquor Bar offers history and great pints.

Getting to Northern Ireland is easy with Norwegian.

Belfast is home to stunning nature, historical castles, and a thriving cultural center - a perfect jumping off point to discover Northern Ireland. Enjoy direct flights from New York's Stewart International Airport and Providence/Boston to Belfast when you fly Norwegian, voted the World's Best Low-Cost, Long Haul Airline for the 3rd year in a row by Skytrax.

Urban legends of America

Halloween doesn't last just one day when your town is haunted by these creatures.

Fodor's Travel

Walk the real-life haunted halls of the Overlook Hotel in Colorado. MOVIEFONE

Hell's Gate Bridge

Visit Oxford, Alabama, to shop at Old Mill Mall, see its famous 67-mile walking track, or literally go to hell. It's just a short drive down the Boiling Springs Road Bridge. Stop in the middle, look behind you and you'll see the doorway to Hades right through your rear-view mirror. Back your car in and you won't be able to drive out again.

Direwolves

If you're secretly sure that you're a long-lost member of House Stark, let the Old Gods guide you to the Idaho Rocky Mountains. Locals there have been reporting very large wolves and "savagery on domesticated animals" for years now. Get eaten by them and unfortunately that means that you're not a member of a fictional royal family and you have our fictional condolences.

The Ghost of Justice Chew

Make a pilgrimage to Dover, Delaware, to visit the ghost of Chief Justice Chew, patron saint of all those afflicted with mildly amusing surnames. On autumn nights, he rises, hell-bent on revenge against the townspeople who tormented him while he was alive, by pretending to sneeze "ah Chew" whenever he passed. Now he has the last laugh and descends on unsuspecting passers-by, black robes billowing in the wind, and makes them sneeze … a lot of times in a row. Locals say it's scarier than it sounds.

The Fouke Monster

If you smell something horrible while in the woods of Miller County, Arkansas, try to be polite. This urban legend isn't just a 7-foot-tall shaggy skunk ape, he's the star of the 1971 classic "Legend of Boggy Creek" (and the four sequels that followed). But before you ask for an autograph, snap a picture first. You'll be the first person to catch him on film since the 1970s.

Ghosts at the Roosevelt Hotel

You've missed your chance to see Marilyn Monroe on the red carpet, but you can still be haunted by her at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel in California. Monroe is frequently spotted in the full-length mirror (vain much?) by her poolside suite. And she's not the only celebrity who still wants to see and be seen in the afterlife. Ghostly musicians still play their trumpets at night and Montgomery Clift reportedly recites his lines in the hallway.

Jackalopes are said to have magical powers. JASON MCELWEENIE, FLICKR

The Stanley Hotel

Colorado's Stanley Hotel is so haunted, it scared "The Shining" right out of Stephen King. If you feel like you might have a thriller waiting beneath the surface, we suggest trying a night's stay. Most guests report witnessing paranormal activity, and while Jack Nicholson won't be there, "The Shining" plays 24 hours a day on channel 42.

Little People's Village

Fans of architecture and the occult will want to mark the creepily abandoned doll village in the woods of Middlebury, Connecticut. The demonic voices that commanded their architect to build them (then kill himself once he was done) are reportedly still living inside of them. Locals say you can hear them at night, but as long as you don't have a background in construction, you should be fine.

The Jackalope

The Jackalope is part jackrabbit, part antelope, and emblazoned all over local souvenirs in Arizona. But if you do decide to hunt the most whimsical game in the Southwest, know this: Jackalope milk may be a highly prized aphrodisiac, but Jackalope are quick, and their horns are sharp.

Fountain of Youth

With true stories of face-eating cannibals and attack monkeys with herpes, Florida doesn't need any more scary stories. Urban legend seekers travel to Florida to visit the Fountain of Youth — and, because this is the state of Disney World — the 15-acre theme park devoted to all things eternal life.

Club-hopping vampires

Friends of Anne Rice will want to spend an evening at Atlanta's Masquerade Night Club, famous as the club of choice for actual vampires. Tourists come to soak in the goth vibe and spot the creepy "tall man in black" who roams the building at night. Freak accidents, disembodied screams, and unexplained fires have also been reported, making many suspect that vampires aren't the only creatures haunting the place.

Spam Traffic Jam

Visit the Hawaiian island of Oahu to meddle in deities' centuries-old relationship squabbles. No one's exactly sure what happened between Volcano goddess Pele and her half-man, half-pig ex-lover, Kamapua'a, but now Pele doesn't allow pork on her side of the island. Try to drive there with it in your car and it will stop in its tracks–until you feed the pork to a passing dog. Now that's pettiness worth traveling for.

INCREASED TOUCHES FOR LEWIS SHOULD CATAPULT THE PATRIOTS

OPINION

DANNY PICARD
@dannypicard

Dion Lewis has gotten back on track in the month of October. GETTY IMAGES

It wasn't too long ago that Dion Lewis described this as a "tough situation" in New England.

He was referring to his usage. Not just in a vacuum, but in a contract year.

Talking to NBC Sports Boston's Mike Giardi several days after a Week 3 win over the Houston Texans, Lewis expressed his frustration with limited playing time.

Usually, in Foxboro, that doesn't go over well. But in fairness to Lewis, also usually, that type of frustrated and somewhat individualistic attitude leaks onto the practice field, stinks up the locker room and turns into an ugly situation.

Credit Lewis for not letting it get to that point. In fact, extra credit to Lewis for turning it all into a positive, and giving the Patriots another dangerous offensive weapon during a time in which they were looking to make improvements across the board.

That's not to say the Patriots, at 5-2, are a finished product. There isn't a single person in the organization that will tell you they are. But after Lewis finished Sunday night's win over the Atlanta Falcons with a season-high 13 rush attempts for 76 yards, it's clear that the Pats are much closer to being that finished product when he's getting his touches.

Since making those comments after Week 3, Lewis' rushing attempts have increased every week. He had four attempts in Week 4 against Carolina, seven attempts in Week 5 against Tampa Bay, 11 attempts in Week 6 against the Jets, and 13 attempts in Week 7 against Atlanta.

He didn't just talk. He didn't just complain. He put in the work. And it's paying off for him and his team.

Lewis this season

vs. KC: 2 carries, 9 yards

vs. NO: 4 carries, 14 yards

vs. HOU: 2 carries, 5 yards

vs. CAR: 4 carries, 18 yards, 1 TD

vs. TB: 7 carries, 53 yards

vs. NYJ: 11 carries, 52 yards, 1 TD

vs. ATL: 13 carries, 76 yards

If this trend continues, then Week 8 is looking like it could end up being "the Dion Lewis game" at Gillette Stadium.

The 3-4 Los Angeles Chargers will make the cross-country trek for a 1 p.m. kickoff, having won three straight games. They allow just 18.7 points per game, which ranks eighth in the NFL. But there's one stat that should jump out at the Patriots, and Lewis.

The Chargers have the second-worst run defense in the league, allowing 141 rush yards per game. In their four losses this season, they've allowed the opposing team's top rusher to average 128 yards on the ground per game.

In a Week 1 loss to Denver, C.J. Anderson ran for 81 yards on 20 carries. In a Week 2 loss to Miami, Jay Ajayi ran for 122 yards on 28 carries. In a Week 3 loss to Kansas City, Kareem Hunt ran for 172 yards and a touchdown on 17 carries. And in a Week 4 loss to Philadelphia, LeGarrette Blount ran for 136 yards on 16 carries.

This has to make Lewis' eyes light up. Because if the trend with his increased usage continues, then I expect Lewis to get close to 20 carries on Sunday, which could make him good for over 100 yards rushing. A presence like that in the backfield, moving forward, would be one of the most important in-season improvements for a Patriots team that still has plenty of questions on the defensive end.

And if Lewis gets 20 touches a game the rest of the way, it won't be such a tough situation after all, for the player or the team.

Credit both Lewis and the Patriots for handling it the right way.

3 Things to watch for as Patriots take on the Chargers at Gillette

Win ugly

When Julian Edelman was injured in the preseason against the Lions, we should have toned down our expectations for this Patriots offense. Tom Brady has not hit the 300-passing-yard mark the last two weeks, but the Patriots (5-2) won anyway. Expect more "early 2000s Brady" for the rest of the regular season and then for them to crank it up with Brady when the games truly matter. It could be another relatively quiet day for Rob Gronkowski on Sunday too, as the Chargers (3-4) are the fourth-best team in the league statistically against tight ends. Expect a James White, a Chris Hogan, or a Danny Amendola to have a big game receiving to pick up the slack.

Find the weakness

The Patriots' backfield is finally finding its way. On Sunday night against the Falcons, the Pats rushed for 162 yards as a team. As they find their groove, the Chargers come to Foxboro at just the right time as LA is giving up 140.6 yards per game on the ground, the second worst mark in the NFL. The Chargers' pass defense is much better as it allows only 185.4 yards per game through the air, the fifth best mark in pro football. Look for Brady to have another conservative game and for Dion Lewis, Rex Burkhead and Mike Gillislee to get plenty of touches.

WEEK 8
Sunday at 1 p.m. on CBS

Average Phil

The Patriots made Matt Ryan look average on Sunday night as last year's MVP completed 22-of-33 passes for 233 yards, 1 TD and 0 INTs. He finished with a passer rating of 99.7. Good, but far from great. Chargers QB Philip Rivers has had a similarly average season this year as he's had a couple dud games mixed in with a few outstanding outings. He was picked off three times and didn't have a TD against Kansas City on Sept. 24 and completed just 21-of-44 passes against the Giants on Oct. 8. In all other games this year, though, Rivers registered a passer rating of 99.6 or above. There's no reason the resurgent Patriots defense can't make Rivers have a game with, say, 230 yards, 1 TD and 1 INT.

Celtics looking to extend win streak out on the road

The Celtics' worst game of the young season so far was their 108-100 Oct. 18 home loss to the Bucks, in which Giannis Antetokounmpo poured in 37 points and Kyrie Irving shot an abysmal 7-of-25 from the field.

Irving and the C's (2-2) can get quick redemption on Thursday (8 p.m., TNT) when they take on the Bucks in Milwaukee in front of a nationally televised audience.

Irving did a solid job of moving the basketball in the Celtics blowout win over the Knicks on Tuesday night, passing up several wide open looks. He is averaging 6.0 assists per game so far this season, which is consistent with what Isaiah Thomas put up in the flow of the Celtics' offense last season. Thomas put up 5.9 assists per game with the C's last year.

Kyrie Irving is averaging 6.0 assists per game this season. GETTY IMAGES

Last year with the Cavs, Irving averaged 5.8 assists per game and the year the Cavs won the title in 2015-16, Irving averaged 4.7 assists per game.

It's entirely possible that Irving is using the early portion of this season to make sure he has his role of "distributor" down pat before he starts going into business for himself on the offensive end.

What's on tap?
After the showdown against the Bucks in Milwaukee, the Celtics will continue their brief road trip with a Monday night game against the Heat on South Beach. Miami is 2-1 this season and figures to be one of the sneaky good teams in the East. Hassan Whiteside has been a monster for Miami early in the season as he's averaging 26.0 points and a whopping 22.0 rebounds per game. Old friend Kelly Olynyk is averaging 11.0 points per game for the Heat.

Aries Emotional decisions are not likely to turn out the way you want. Personal growth, general improvement and stabilizing your future should be your goals.

Taurus Finish what you start. Your reputation will get a boost if you can turn chaos into order. An intellectual discussion with someone very different from you will be enlightening.

Gemini An emotional incident will leave you questioning your next move. Take better care of your emotional frame of mind. Finish one job before starting another to avoid criticism.

Cancer Don't feel the need to make an abrupt change or impulsive decision. You have plenty of time to research and figure out what exactly you want to do.

Leo Avoid people with colds and flus, and places likely to have lots of germs. Protect your health and stay focused on getting plenty of rest and eating properly.

Virgo Networking functions will lead to new opportunities. Adapt to whatever changes come your way. Your ability to go with the flow will help you accomplish your goals.

Libra Don't say or do something you'll regret. Revealing a secret or arguing over something trivial will not help you win friends or favors. Personal growth should be your goal.

Scorpio Make your home your haven. A creative space that you can tinker in will lead to a pursuit that you find inspiring and others will be intrigued by.

Sagittarius Protect against emotional stress. Stay on top of unfinished business to ensure that it is completed before it's due. Don't let temptation turn into a financial loss.

Capricorn Mesh the past with the present and you will be able to build a solid future. Reuniting with old friends or colleagues will open doors that can lead to new beginnings.

Aquarius There is no room for risk. Jumping into a deal without doing proper research will put you in a difficult position personally and financially.

Pisces Your participation in community events or a joint venture will give you a chance to show off your skills and offer unique solutions. EUGENIA LAST
